Have you ever heard the expression "it was like drinking from a fire hose". Well, if you have, then you know what it is like to interview Margo Eremus, the owner of Frames and Company. Margo is simply the personification of enthusiasm and high energy. This year her fine business, Frames and Company, will be celebrating 35 years of service to valued customers throughout the Delaware Valley and beyond.

Margo Eremus began her career as an English/Spanish teacher at Marple/Newtown High School. Her move to the world of framing and art consultant was simply another venue of teaching rather than an abandonment of teaching. Just as she loved to share her teaching with her students, she came to love sharing her knowledge and gifts with the people who were seeking services for their artwork and pictures. During the early years of her business she actually established 26 franchises in the area. However, when her children arrived, she determined to make the time for them and so discontinued the franchise aspect of her business. The challenge and satisfaction that Margo and her capable staff of 8 other very well trained employees experiences in serving customers is found in knowing that they have helped a customer solve a problem and preserve deeply valued art objects.

However, the outstanding feature of Frames and Company is not the gazillion choices of frames, pictures, mirrors, or special framing instruction, but the people themselves who make up the employees. It would be difficult to total the number of years of experience that the combined employees represent, but it would be a statistic that would be the envy of any business in our community. Some have been with Margo almost from the beginning, but all have been with her for many years. In interviewing some of the employees, it became immediately apparent that these folks truly enjoy working with each other and supporting each other. It seems that this internal base of loyalty is the well spring that has created a customer base that is also extremely loyal.

With the Christmas season soon to arrive, you might want to stop by Frames and Company and have one of your special pictures or objects preserved in the most amazing way. I can assure you that you will not surprise them with your request. They have framed almost anything such as: Christening dresses, dirty football jerseys, bats, sticks, scorecards, playing cards, dishes, dolls, money and maps. And if you don't have a clue as to where to start with selecting the matting or the most appropriate type frame, then you are just the kind of customer that Margo Eremus and her skilled "family of employees" is eager to serve. They will help you find the answer. Stop in! You will not be sorry that you did!
